Oh, he was poor, and I was poor:
So, though I was fair, I had scarce a woe.
But he said the street of my golden hair
Was brighter than gold, beyond compare.
And no jewels, I thought, could ever outshine
The light of his eyes when they looked into mine.
But the world had taught us its cold, stern
rules.
We knew it would mock us and call us fools.

So he chose for himself another bride
To reign in his home, to walk by his side.
Of gold she brought him a goodly store,
Of gold and silver; but ah, what more?
I goaded in velvet right royally,
And my rich old lord looks his eyes on me,
And the world applauds; we have followed its rules.
But our own hearts mock us and whisper
"Fools."

Battling With the World.

Philadelphia Times.

Many a young girl who has been brought up with the idea that her parents' money would carry her through this life on the top wave, has discovered that riches take to themselves wings, and that the hand that had never known more arduous labor than the stitches in a bit of fancy work must take up something that would bring bread and butter into the cupboard where cake was formerly wont to abound.

Strange as it may seem, the richer a woman has been in most cases she accepts the come-down more gracefully and sensibly than the sister who has been only moderately well off, yet to no one does such a change come as a pleasant one, though there are phases even in such a misfortune that are both helpful and instructive.

A pretty young woman of our acquaintance whose early life was passed amid a profusion of earthly luxuries found, just at that period when she anticipated much from her debut in society, that some unfortunate speculations of her father's necessitated a change in their mode of living and urged her to look about for something to do.

This something she found, and did it thoroughly and well, too, and though her career of stopping in and giving her to marriage sleeping in and giving her to long vacation, she still has learned in that brief period lessons that she never could have gained in any other way. Quoting her own words she said: "It was very hard at first to go out into the world, especially when my girl friends would come to me and say: 'You poor dear thing, how perfectly dreadful it is for you to actually work for your living.' We never could do it, that is certain." But after a while I didn't mind these remarks, and to-day I wouldn't give the practical knowledge I have gained for all the fun I have lost. I know now the value of a dollar and I realize how hard a man has to work to earn a living. My experience has taught me economy and I am certain to make a better wife than if I had never had to go out in the world and fight for myself."

It is a hard school, dear girls, but if necessity compels you to enter it do it cheerfully and put to the best advantage the lessons taught by that very severe disciplinarian—actual experience.

Against the Crinoline.
Mrs. Arthur Stannard ("John Strange Winter"), has started in England a crusade against crinoline. She has been joined in her protest by hundreds of other writers, and the war waxes merry. Meantime the Parisian modistes look satirically on and vow under heaven that they mean no harm whatever.

And there are John Strange Winters all around us; as witness this letter: "The full skirts of the walking dresses," writes Anna E. O., "are stiffened to the knees, and the edge of the skirt is given that piquant little flare which is the premonition of the coming crinoline. 'Just think,' she adds, 'just think of the sensible American woman allowing herself to appear in crinoline! That, alas! is what we are coming to. I hope my sisters will let crinoline alone, regarding it as an absurd fancy of the modistes.'"

A Sweet Memory Pillow.
Almost every woman, be she maid, wife or widow, has flowers sent and given to her during the winter. A pretty and easy way to preserve both the blossoms and the remembrances connected with them is to make them into a pillow or chair rest. After the flowers are faded strip off the petals, sprinkle them loosely upon a newspaper or towel and dry them in front of the fire, over the steam register or in the sunny window of a warm room. When you have thus saved enough flower feathers to begin a pillow make a square or rectangular case, china silk on one side, white, pink, blue or apple green and fine strong silk bolting cloth on the other, the edges finished with lace, ribbon or any pretty device. Fill the case with the dried flower petals, whose varied tints will show beautifully through the bolting cloth against the background of color.

Now comes the delicate and endearing part of the work.
Write upon the blotting-cloth with a camel's hair brush and sepia or water-color the name or initials of the different givers of the flower—or the date or any little word or hint connected with the incident. This will dry quickly and will make a pretty network of spider-web effect over the petals beneath. If the dried flowers are not as fragrant as you wish, add to the collection a package of the pot-pouri bought in drug stores—a bunch of sweet lavender or even some tiny sacket bags of soft ribbon to blend with the flower leaves. The pillow is as sweet to the tired head as a heap of dead leaves under a favorite tree in the autumn and will "last" through a whole winter of losing. Try it.

An Alphabet Supper.
Philadelphia Times.

If you have run the gamut of card parties, luncheons, charades, tableaux vivants, rainbow sociables and the like and are in search of the novel and amusing an alphabet supper can be recommended with perfect safety, as it is in its line one of the fanniest as well as the cheapest of affairs.

The idea is to serve only those dishes that come to you in the turn of letters in the alphabet. For instance, a number of friends join together for mutual amusement during the winter. The first one who gives an affair serves only such things to eat as begin with "A." The next one follows suit with "B," and so on until the alphabet has been used up as far as the number of parties given will allow.

If you think for a moment the humorous possibilities of such a bill of fare are certain to present themselves, and a conglomeration can be served, strictly carrying out the idea of the letter, yet which will be as ridiculous as possible. With "A" apples, almonds, and anchovies are among the delicacies, while "B" presents greater possibilities with beans, bread, bisque and other refreshments beginning with the second letter.

It looks simple, but the ingenuity of a hostess sometimes has to be exerted to the utmost to serve a palatable meal which at the same time, strictly fulfills the law laid down respecting her special initial. The element of surprise in the matter is no small or unimportant item, as the guests do not know what strange dish may be set before them. An epicure might object to this extraneous mode of catering, yet, as an innovation, it has its advantages over many other forms of amusement that may be more elegant, but not one-half as original.

Notes of Women.

The Archduchess Stephanie, widow of the Austrian crown prince, recently paid $400 in Vienna for a parrot which could recite the Pater Noster in six different languages. The archduchess heard the wonderful bird, which recited gravely, while his master stood by, and was charmed with it. But when she got it home to the imperial palace she found that it could not say a word. The merchant was arrested and confessed that he was a ventriloquist and had done all the talking for the bird. The only thing which he had taught it was to open its mouth and seemed to talk while the ventriloquist lasted.

Mrs. Linden Kent, of Washington, has given the University of Virginia $50,000 to endow a chair of English literature. Her husband was a distinguished graduate of the university. He died during the past summer, and it is surmised that she gives this money to establish a memorial to him. Colonel Archer Anderson, of Richmond, has also recently given the university $5,000.

After the wedding of her daughter the Duchess of Edinburgh started for St. Petersburg with her three married daughters, to pay a lengthy visit to the czar and czarina. This is in accordance with a family law promulgated by the present czar shortly after his accession, which prescribes that the grand duchesses of the imperial family shall spend a certain portion of the year in their native country, under penalty of losing a portion of their dowers.

The material for the women's monument to the mother of George Washington is to be of Barre granite, and the contract, already awarded, calls for completion in 1895. This monument in honor of Mary Washington has been in the main a woman's movement, and the memorial association which has it in charge was founded at the home of Mrs. Waite, widow of the chief justice. The association has a vice president and a branch in nearly every state, but the $30,000 required for the completion of the monument is by no means subscribed.

SELECTED RECIPES.

Beef of Mutton Kidneys.—First parboil, changing the water three times and adding to the last a little salt. Chop fine and cook in cream enough to form a gravy which must be thickened and a very small quantity of chopped parsley added. Or halve the smaller kidneys, but not cutting entirely open; heat a little butter in the dripping pan until it smokes and put in the kidneys, turning constantly until done, garnish with parsley.

Chicken Croquettes.—Cut the chicken off the bones, mince fine, moisten with the gravy in which it was stewed, season with pepper and salt, make into small forms with a jelly glass, dip in egg and fine bread crumbs and fry in hot lard or butter.

Ramequins.—Two eggs, two spoonfuls of flour, two ounces of melted butter, two ounces of grated cheese. Mix all well and bake in 10 molds or tart pans for a quarter of an hour.

A Good Cup of Chocolate.—Let the milk come to a boil. For every two cups mix a heaping teaspoonful of grated chocolate with enough cold milk to form a paste. Pour this into the milk which has come to a boil. Let it boil three minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

Deputy Marshals Killed.

MUSKOGEE, I. T., Feb. 8.—News has reached here of the killing of Deputy Marshals Rusk, Bruner and Knight, near Tablequah, by Bill Pigeon, an Indian desperado. Pigeon lives in a fortified house in the Cherokee nation, and his capture has been attempted many times without success. Ned Christy, another member of the gang, was killed a short time ago by these marshals.

Gambling Among Students.

ALLIANCE, O., Feb. 8.—Mount Union college has been badly torn up lately over the conduct of a number of students. Thorough investigations have made, resulting in the suspension of seven of the students.

ED SMITH'S BACKER

Has Confidence Enough in Him to Bet All He Can Raise.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—John J. Quinn, "Doubt" Ed Smith's backer, writes that Smith is training faithfully at Scranton, Miss., and will be in condition to fight the battle of his life. Quinn figures that Goldard will be the favorite and that he can get as much as much as two to one on his man. He will bet all he can rake or scrape on the result.

Billy Madden writes from Mount Clemens that he leaves on Thursday for New York and a few days thereafter will start for New Orleans and join Goldard in his training quarters. Madden is anxious for the big Australian to meet Mitchell, and suggests that, as at least eight months will elapse before Corbett is ready to fight Mitchell, the Englishman, accommodate Joe with a "scrap."

A MOTHER'S SEARCH

For Her Kidnapped Child—The Divorced Husband Located.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Feb. 8.—Chief of Police Clark several days ago located James M. Chase, the man wanted here on a charge of kidnapping. Mrs. Chase, the divorced wife, and mother of the child, has been very persistent in her efforts to find her child, and upon notification by Captain Clark yesterday that Chase had taken the child to the home of his father, in Warren Centre, Pa., and that it was now at that place, Mrs. Chase started out on her mission. Captain Clark gave her letters of introduction to the chief of police and other city officials of Warren Centre, and he thinks she will have no difficulty in securing the child. If the child is given into the custody of Mrs. Chase without opposition she will probably withdraw the prosecution against her divorced husband.

STARVING GAME.

Virginia Sports Take Measures to Save Them From the Effects of the Cold.

RICMOND, VA., Feb. 8.—It is feared that the freeze has resulted in great damage to the game in the surrounding counties. Partridges are reported to have frozen in whole coveys, and hares have frozen and starved in large numbers. Polk Miller, the president of the Virginia Field Sport association, has published a circular requesting farmers to feed the game and the association would pay for it; also to trap and save all the birds possible. A great many partridges have been shipped here, and Mr. Miller is taking care of them. They will be liberated in different parts of the state as soon as the weather gets settled.

Snow in Texas.

SAN ANGELO, TEXAS, Feb. 8.—It has been snowing heavily here since yesterday morning with no indication of abating. Cattle and sheep are in fine shape and will probably not suffer from the storm. The thermometer is down to 17 degrees below freezing, the coldest of the winter.

After Bathing

the first time with Pearline, you feel as if you never had been clean before. Possibly you haven't. Only baths like the Turkish or the Russian can make you as clean as Pearline does. There's the same feeling of lightness and luxury after it, too.

Bathing with Pearline costs almost nothing. It's like everything else—you would long for it, if it were expensive, but you're apt to overlook it when it's cheap. Directions on every package.

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled. If your grocer sends you this kind of soap, call and see us first.
